West Columbia, S.C. – John “Chuck” Hyer, director of maintenance at South Carolina Aeronautics Commission, was named the 2020 SC Flight Standards District Office (FSDO) Aviation Maintenance Technician (AMT) today.

Hyer was nominated for the FSDO award after being recognized by SC Aviation Association as its AMT of the Year during South Carolina Aviation Week in August 2020. AMTs are integral to the aviation industry, keeping aircraft operational by performing repairs, inspections and scheduled maintenance.

“Chuck embodies the characteristics of the ideal aviation maintenance technician. He is thorough in his work and is committed to providing flawless aircraft maintenance, all while adhering to a higher standard in aviation safety,” said South Carolina Aeronautics Commission Executive Director James Stephens.

Hyer was one of five nominees for the award. Combined, the field possessed more than 150 years of service in aviation maintenance, more than 100 years maintenance experience in South Carolina, and numerous FAA and manufacturer-specific certifications.

“Chuck was selected from among an elite group of candidates,” Stephens said. “His dedication to his responsibilities, his consistent quality of work, and his philosophy of sharing his knowledge and experience with others are what make him stand out.”
